Pastor's Corner

Well, this past Thursday, I did my first wedding since becoming pastor here in Benicia, and it was such a joy! It was the first wedding I had ever done in which the couple opted to do a lasso ceremony, which was very cool. The wedding lasso is rooted in Mexican, Filipino, and other cultures with a strong Latin influence. It involves wrapping a garland or two rosaries joined by one crucifix around the couple, signifying the bond they will share while they are both alive. It is a bond established by God and reflects his original intention for the one-flesh union of marriage. Implicit to Saint Paul's teaching on marriage in Ephesians 5 is that marriage is meant to serve as an image of Christ's love for his church. Now, if the Sacrament of Matrimony is meant to be an image of Christ's love of his church, we can see why it would make sense for its bond to be unflinching. Christ's love for us is certainly unflinching, and the lifelong commitment of matrimony can serve as a powerful reminder of that. This is especially true when both members of a marriage strive to allow their marriage bond to be a means by which each grows in greater virtue by serving the other. I always tell my marriage prep couples, "For the rest of your marriage, when you get up in the morning each day, ask God to help you be the best version of yourselves for your spouse." A husband and wife may not be successful at that goal everyday. But if both spouses in a marriage are actively trying to make that ideal a reality, the quality of their married life is likely to be so much happier and more fulfilling. I realize that seems obvious, but it is easy for us human beings to lose sight of obvious truths. Sometimes even devoutly Catholic spouses can end up treating the lifelong nature of matrimony as a cause for license to slack off from being the best versions of themselves for their spouses. This makes a mockery of the sacrament, not to mention a lot of misery for both the husband and wife, in many cases. Let us all pray for more healthy marriages in the world, and certainly in the Church! It is a beautiful sacrament by which Christians can grow in virtue, model Christ's love for his Church, and be made holier and more ready to share in Our Lord's everlasting happiness in Heaven!
